

Mark Herzog is the Associate Director of the D.C. Bar Pro Bono Program which strives to mobilize the private bar and government attorneys to assist in making legal information, advice, brief services and representation fully available to people living in poverty in the District of Columbia. Prior to joining the Pro Bono Program in 1994, Mark was an adjunct professor of law at the D.C. Law Students In Court Program, and a senior staff attorney at The Legal Aid Society, Criminal Defense Division, New York City. He graduated from The George Washington University Law School in 1986. Mark is a former vice-chair of the Board of Directors of Whitman-Walker Clinic and a former co-chair of GAYLAW.